GNFAC,

Went for a quick rip up Dudley Creek this afternoon. Seems to be a similar snowpack to other low elevation areas like Mt Ellis. We didn't get above about 8200', but on that south facing slope HS was ~50-70cm, generally weak snow felt with pole probes. It was more supportable for boot penetration than I expected. Ski pen was 5cm, boot pen was 15cm. 2" of new snow sat on a breakable sun crust, it skied better than I thought it would on the skin up.

Thanks for everything you guys do!
